Violence can be seen in far too many programs on t.v. from the actual killing to the depiction of dead bodies in their homicidal positions on shows like CSI, NCIS, etc. I have unplugged from cable for the very reason of not wanting those shows to be in my home on what used to be cable quality programing. Now however, noncable shows are presenting over-the-edge type scenes as well as profanity and lewed, sexual conversation that does not have a place on public broadcasting. Reserve that for the movies where you pay to have the insults and scenes, not on the "family" channels like ABC,CBS, and NBC. Our quality of entertainment is very degrading to the family. Please curtail the use of profanity and the scenes of dead bodies our our programming. The industry is pushing the standards so out of proportion that it is contributing to the desensitising of our youth on the value of human life.
